- Metrolinx plans to cut down the historic Osgoode Hall trees to excavate a large hole for the Ontario Line. The hole will be filled with elevators and escalators, plus a station building, so that no mature trees can ever grow here again. On Friday night, in the dark, guarded by police, without consultation or notification, Metrolinx put up a fence.
- The loss of these trees will alter the quality of this heritage space forever.
- Without this oasis in the heart of downtown, Torontonians and visitors will have no escape from the concrete desert.
- Good alternatives are possible. Come and find out more!
